TWO SPIDERS FIGHT A DUEL.

It Was a Genuine Affair d'Honneur, Seconds and All.

ONE JUMPED THE OTHER'S CLAIM.

It Was a Struggle to the Death and the Little Fellow Conquered-The Graphic Story of an Eye-Witnesses.

A big window in the southeast corner of the old warehouse at the head of lake Keuka, in this place, is covered, as with a curtain, by spider webs.

The panes of this window are the small squares of the old days. A big, ovalbodied, grayish-brown spider, had his web spread over the entire surface of one pane of glass and over all but one small corner of another. In that corner a plump black spider has his modest but effective trap. The other day the big spider evidently concluded that he needed more room, says the New York

He ran out a cable that passed across one edge of the black spider's web and fastened it to the edge of the sash between that pane and the next one. This cable was quickly followed by another, and a third one was strung before the little black spider seemed to wake up to what was going on. Then he came out of his corner and gave the big spider's audacions work a quick inspection. That having evidently satisfied him of the intention of the big trespasser, he nipped the three cables apart, one after another. and left them dangling uselessly in the air. The little spider, having destroyed the cables, retired to the seclusion of his corner and resumed his watch for flies. The big fellow recovered from his surprise and immediately threw another caple across the little one's web. Out came the little fellow with a rush and snapped that cable asunder. Four times after that the big spider strung a cable, and each time the little spider cut it down. The little black fellow tore about in his corner as If in a towering rare, and while his fury was at its height another spider, with a long, ugly-looking head and a small body, came down from a pane above the little black one's corner. This spider joined the raging black one, and by and by the latter cooled down. The two spiders remained together in apparent; confidential intercourse for a few sec onds, and then the spider with the big head darted out upon the brown spider web and followed it to the big fellow's den. Then he lingered for a moment, evidently discussing the matter with the big brown spider, and then he darted off again in another direction and brought up a web on the pane above the big spider's, where another spider hung listlessiy, wrapped up in his long, hairy legs. A short confab took place between the two, and then the hairy spider dropped down quickly to the big brown spider's den, and the spider with the big head returned hurriedly to the little black spider's corner.

A few seconds after the big-headed spider had returned to the black spider's corner the two glided out, reached the big brown spider's web, advanced almost to the center of it, and stopped. The brown spider and his hairy attendant afterward emerged from the former's den and advanced toward the center of the web, stopping within an inch or so of the black spider and his second. Other members of the spider colony must have had intuitive knowledge of what was going on, for spiders of all sizes and shapes came speeding to the scene to get a view of what was evidently to be a fierce encounter. When the two principal spiders had taken their positions their respective attendants retired some distance from them. Then the little black syider and his big brown foe rushed together.

They struggled a moment, separated, rushed together again, and tumbled and tossed one another about until the web on which they fought swayed and bent and broke here and there into ragged holes. All the while the hairy spider and the spider with the big head hovered frantically each about his principal, as if coaching the fighters as to best advantage. When the battle was at its height one round-bodied blac pider made a rush into the field to take hand in the fight. Before he reache the contestants, however, he was col lared by both the hairy spider and the big-headed spider, and hustled back into the crowd so quick that he seemed dazed and remained perched on the edge of the

While this exciting side incident wa ongaging the attention of the sec onds the principals separated, each re-treating a couple of inches. The at tendant spiders rushed each to his prin cipal's side and for several seconds things remained quiet. Then the pugnacious little black spider moved slowly forward and the big fellow advanced to meet him. When they were nearly to-gether the little spider shot forward like a flash, pounced upon the big one and almost as quick darted back again. That was a fatal blow to the big spider. In that sudden dash the little spider had In that sudden dash the little spider had chopped off one of of the big one's long forelegs close to his body as neatly as he had cut the cables of his foe's intruding

Then the black spider darted at his big antagonist with the rapidity of lightning and it was not long till he had severed the other foreleg of the big spider as completely as he had the first one. The brown was now almost totally helpless. By a quick flank movement the little black mounted the other's huge body and closed his jaws firmly in the back of his neck. The big spider floundered and struggled, but all to no purpose. His life blood was fast being drained by his agile foe and in a minute after the black spider had got his clutch. after the black spider had got his clutch on the brown one's neck the big fellow hung shriveled and lifeless in the wreck of the web he had tried to enlarge at the expense of his bold and nervy little neighbor.

But the little black spider was not satisfied with the death of the encroaching spider and the ruin of his web.

When he found his foe was dead he made a circuit of the outer edge of the web, cutting every stay cable and guy web from its fastenings, until the limp body of its late occupant and the dis-mantled web fell together on the window ledge, among a mass of dead and shriv-eled files and beetles' wings and heaps of dusty, cast-off webs.

The duel was over.

An Economic Georgian.

A man in Houston county, Georgia, in order to save the extravagance of a wife and the expense of hiring a cook, shells his corn and before carrying it to mill spreads it on the floor before the fire, where it is parched. The corn is then ground into meal and when he starts to work in the morning he makes up a mash of meal and places it out in the sun to dry. As the meal is already cooked it will be ready for his dinner when he comes in from work.

Syrup of Figs. Produced from the laxative and nutritious juice of California figs, combined with the medicinal virtues of plants known to be most beneficial to the buman system, acts gently on the kidneys, liver and bowels, effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds and headaches, and curing habitual constipation.

The Origin of Calculate. When people say "calculate" they use a word which goes back to the very infancy of our race and the very beginning of the science of arithmetic. It comes from the Latin calculus, a pebble. When men first began to reckon and to compare numbers they could think of no better way than to lay pebbles along side oi one another on the ground, and hence the word for counting.

The consciousness of having a remedy at hand for croup, pneumonia, sore throat, and sudden colds, is very consoling to a parent. With a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in the house, one feels, in such ases, a sense of security nothing else can give.

Feodor von Freimann, a veteran of the Franco-Russian war of 1812, died re-cently at the age of one hundred and fif-teen years in St. Petersburg. He served in the Russian army twenty-five years, and received a cross of St. George for his bravery. At the age of ninety-nine he married a seventeou-year-old girl by whom he had two children. For the last fifty years he had made a daily practice of drinking a pint of cognac just be fore going to bed.

An Ingenious Art Swindle. A curlous art imposition has been discovered in Paris. An ingenious person stole bronze and marble busts from the cemetery of Montparnesse, Paris, touched them up and sold them as effigies of famous heroes, statesmen and orators, did not find it difficult to pass off the busts of departed grocers as Demosthenes or some celebrated genoral.

Jay Gould has His Eye on Trinidad. There is the best of authority for saving that Jay Gould is negotiating for the purchase of a number of thousands of acres of the coa lands about Trinidad, Col., in the interests of the Missouri Pacific road, which only requires an extension from La Junta of 50 miles to reach that point. The coal freightage from Trinidad, which has reached already 8,000 tons per day, and is in its infantcy, is attracting the attention of all railways competing for business in the Rocky mountain country.

A Craze for White Buildings. New York city now has a craze for white buildings, and they accord admirably with the climate. The Fifth Avenue, the Albermarle, the Hoffman, the St. James, the Coleman, the new Imperial are all white, and every one is pleased with the tendency.

Do not take any chance of being poisoned or burned to death with liquid stove polish, paints or enamels in bottles. The "Rising Sun Stove Polish" is safe, odorless, brilliant, the cheapest and best stove polish made and the consumer pays for no expensive tin or glass package with every purchase.

Some Queer Michigan People. Mackinaw Island, Mich., has some queer people. Enins Pelotte is eightysix years old, was born on the island and has never seen a locomotive or a railroad crr. Rosa Louisignaw is also eighty-six years old, and for sixty years never left the islaud, breaking her record last year.

thrown away in some of the big stores is sufficient to pay a good many salaries. The managers of a large dry goods house in New York awoke to this fact when they learned that the man who had the contract for cleaning their establishment was rapidly acquiring a fortune by selling the waste materials found on the floors. He had undertaken to provide help and see that the place was cleaned nightly in return for the waste paper and pasteboard boxes. It required very little attention, as the man had a foreman to see that the work was done properly. At the expiration of this contract it was not renewed and the house takes the profits.

An Electric Hydrogen Gun.

William T. Chamberlain, of Norwich, has invented and perfected a gun which promises to be the most durable, simple and effectual gun ever made. It is called the electric hydrogen gun. There are three methods of firing the arm. By the first method, Mr. Chemberlain claims, the projectile is sent from the gun by a pressure equal to 37,000 atmospheres, by the second process by four times that force, and by the third method it is transformed into an air gun with a pressure of from 1,500 to 2,000 pounds The gun is simple, without other machinery than the chamber and barrel. The demand for new valvable weapons is so great that some of the great powers may find in this arm the executor they have been anticipating, while Mr. Chamberlain may flud in it

BEAUTIFUL Helena, Montana.

The city of Helena is located in the beautiful Prickly Pear Valley; is substantially built of stone and brick, with good hotels, churches, schools and all modern conveniences of life. The society is exceptionally high class, having more than the average number of educated and intelligent people.

As a place of residence it is unequalited. It can be reached by luxurious trains daily, with through dising cars, on the Great Northern and Northern Pacific Italiwars from St. Paul and Muneapolis, or from Kansas City, via Union Pacific Railroad. Low rate round trip tickets.

Montana has descens of breast valleys so fertile with the deposits of ages that farmers find in them a paradisc of productiveness and shome market for all yield.

Greatest of all advantages of Montana is the wonderful climate. The warm winds of the Pacific Cocan mindify the temperature to the degree which affords the highest physical comfort. The air is so full of ozone and so exhierating in its effects that the continued existence of discase is an improbability.
